

Request information from the Central Driver's License Register

You can apply to the Federal Motor Transport Authority (KBA) online or by post for information about yourself from the Central Driver's License Register.

Competent Department

- Kraftfahrt-Bundesamt

Basic information

The Central Driver's License Register (ZFER) records all driving licenses issued in Germany since January 1, 1999 with the uniform European driving license classes A to E and the national driving license classes.

The Central Driver's License Register stores

- driving licenses issued in Germany according to the uniform European categories A to E and the national German categories M, L, S and T (until January 19, 2013) and L and T (from January 19, 2013)
- for novice drivers, additionally the probationary period
- Driving licenses for passenger transport
- Police, Federal Police and Federal Armed Forces service driver's licenses
- Driving instructor licenses and service driving instructor licenses for driving instructors
- Civilian and official authorizations of motor vehicle experts, examiners and test engineers

The driving license authority reports the data to the Federal Motor Transport Authority after the driving license has been issued. The data relevant to the driving license is stored in the central driving license register, but not the address. Data relevant to driving licenses are, for example

- Personal data
- Driving license and driving license number
- Competent authority
- Driving license classes
- conditions
- Restrictions

You can obtain information from the Central Driver's License Register using the online register information. Alternatively, you can receive the information by post.

Online register information can only be generated if the data in the central driving license register and the available personal data are identical. Alternatively, the information will be processed manually and you will receive the information via the communication channel you have selected.

Requirements
